

Tiny Home Movement: Live a Life of Freedom

Who doesn't want to live their best life? Surely everyone wants it. But unfortunately too many people don't know how to get the freedom to travel and adventure without crippling debt. Most Americans spend 1/3 to 1/2 of their income just on their house. So now's the time to ditch the expensive mortgage and move into a Tiny Home!

Tiny Home Movement

Tiny Homes aren't a new thing, they have become a social movement in the past few years as housing prices have skyrocketed and downsizing to a life of less seems a lot more ideal. In 2019, there were 10k+ Tiny Homes, just in America.

Tiny Homes

An average home is around 2,600 square feet, whereas a tiny home usually ranges from 100 to 400 square feet. They can either be built on a set foundation or they can be built on wheels. This said, there is so much more customization and freedom available with tiny homes with a much tinier price tag.

Benefits

Tiny Homes have many long-lasting benefits both individually and for the community. These benefits include that they are less expensive to build and maintain, are energy efficient, have a reduced environmental impact, and allow for travel (especially when built on wheels)

Tiny Home Villages

Programs such as Operation Tiny Home have partnered with other non-profits to spread availability and awareness of Tiny Homes through the country, in hopes of ending the housing instability and homelessness struggles.
